

CIO Amy Bingham on Frankenmuth Insurance's Mainframe-Free Future.

What really sets our transformation apart is the deliberate focus the organization had on not only modernizing the business, but also being very deliberate to reduce our legacy complexity and technical debt along the way.

-Amy Bingham,
Chief Information Officer

Frankenmuth Insurance's Chief Information Officer, Amy Bingham, was recently featured in Insurance Business Magazine, discussing one of the most significant milestones in the organization's technology transformation.

The article highlights our decade-long effort to modernize core systems while intentionally eliminating legacy technical debt. In March 2026, Frankenmuth Insurance fully decommissioned its mainframe, marking a pivotal shift toward a cloud-native, future-ready infrastructure.

As Amy explains, “What really sets our transformation apart is the deliberate focus the organization had on not only modernizing the business, but also being very deliberate to reduce our legacy complexity and technical debt along the way.”

The feature also explores our migration to Guidewire Cloud, expanded use of insurtech partnerships, and the establishment of an AI Governance and Risk Committee to ensure responsible innovation.
